Overview

The minor in TESOL is an 18-credit level program focusing on the teaching of English to speakers of other languages. It prepares individuals for entry-level positions teaching English in a variety of educational, community, business, and government contexts, with the exception of public K-12 school settings.

Admission

Admission to the minor is open to currently enrolled undergraduate students at Syracuse University. Interested students are encouraged to contact the coordinator of the minor to develop a program of study.

Student Learning Outcomes

1. Use empirical evidence to describe the richness and intricacy of the English language.
2. Describe the principles and characteristics of language teaching methodologies as well as the current mainstream method.
3. Employ phonological, morphological, syntactic, semantic and/or pragmatic analyses in their preparation for English language teaching.
4. Construct and implement prepared lesson plans.

Minor Requirements

Students must complete 18 credits, 12 of which must be at the 300 level or above.
